

REGAN VINCENZA RETURNS WITH DEFIANT POP ANTHEM "GLITTER PARTY" - HER FIRST SINGLE IN SEVEN YEARS

SELF-PRODUCED TRACK MARKS EXCITING NEW CHAPTER
FOR ARTIST WHO'S RECLAIMED CREATIVE CONTROL

After seven years away from releasing music, Regan Vincenza is back with "Glitter Party," a spirited pop anthem that serves as both a declaration of independence and a celebration of artistic freedom. The track, which drops on the 20th of November on Bandcamp, itunes, YouTube, and TikTok, marks a triumphant return for the artist who has finally stepped into the creative role she envisioned as a 13-year-old writing her first songs.

"Glitter Party" is Vincenza's response to years of being dismissed and underestimated in the music industry. The infectious pop track channels influences from Britney Spears to '90s duo Shampoo while maintaining a distinctly personal edge. The chorus refrain—"Glitter party, glitter party, glitter party, yeah, I'll do whatever I want, fuck you I don't care"—captures the song's rebellious spirit and marks a definitive moment of artistic liberation.

"The term 'glitter party' is really a metaphor," explains Vincenza. "It's like saying, you know what, I've had enough of all this rubbish. I'm never going to live up to your ludicrous expectations. I'm throwing it all up in the air and I'll just have fun. Now there's no one around me criticising my voice, musical taste, clothes I wear, the words I use. It's about the demise of everything that held me back."

Having taken full control of the writing, production, and recording process, Vincenza reflects on her journey. "I'm effectively now in the position that I always wanted to be. After feeling stuck for so long, I finally have the experience and confidence to be in full control, and create the way I've always wanted to create."

Vincenza's launch as a self produced solo artist provides the opportunity to find her authentic voice. "Glitter Party" will surprise anyone familiar with her previous work, showcasing a bolder, more unapologetically confident sound that reflects her growth as both a songwriter and producer.

The single serves as a powerful statement of intent from an artist who has found her footing after years of creative struggle. With "Glitter Party," Regan Vincenza isn't just making music—she's reclaiming her narrative and inviting listeners to join her celebration of artistic freedom.

"Glitter Party" will be available on the 20th November on: ● Bandcamp ● itunes ● YouTube ● TikTok
